

Animal Extinction

W

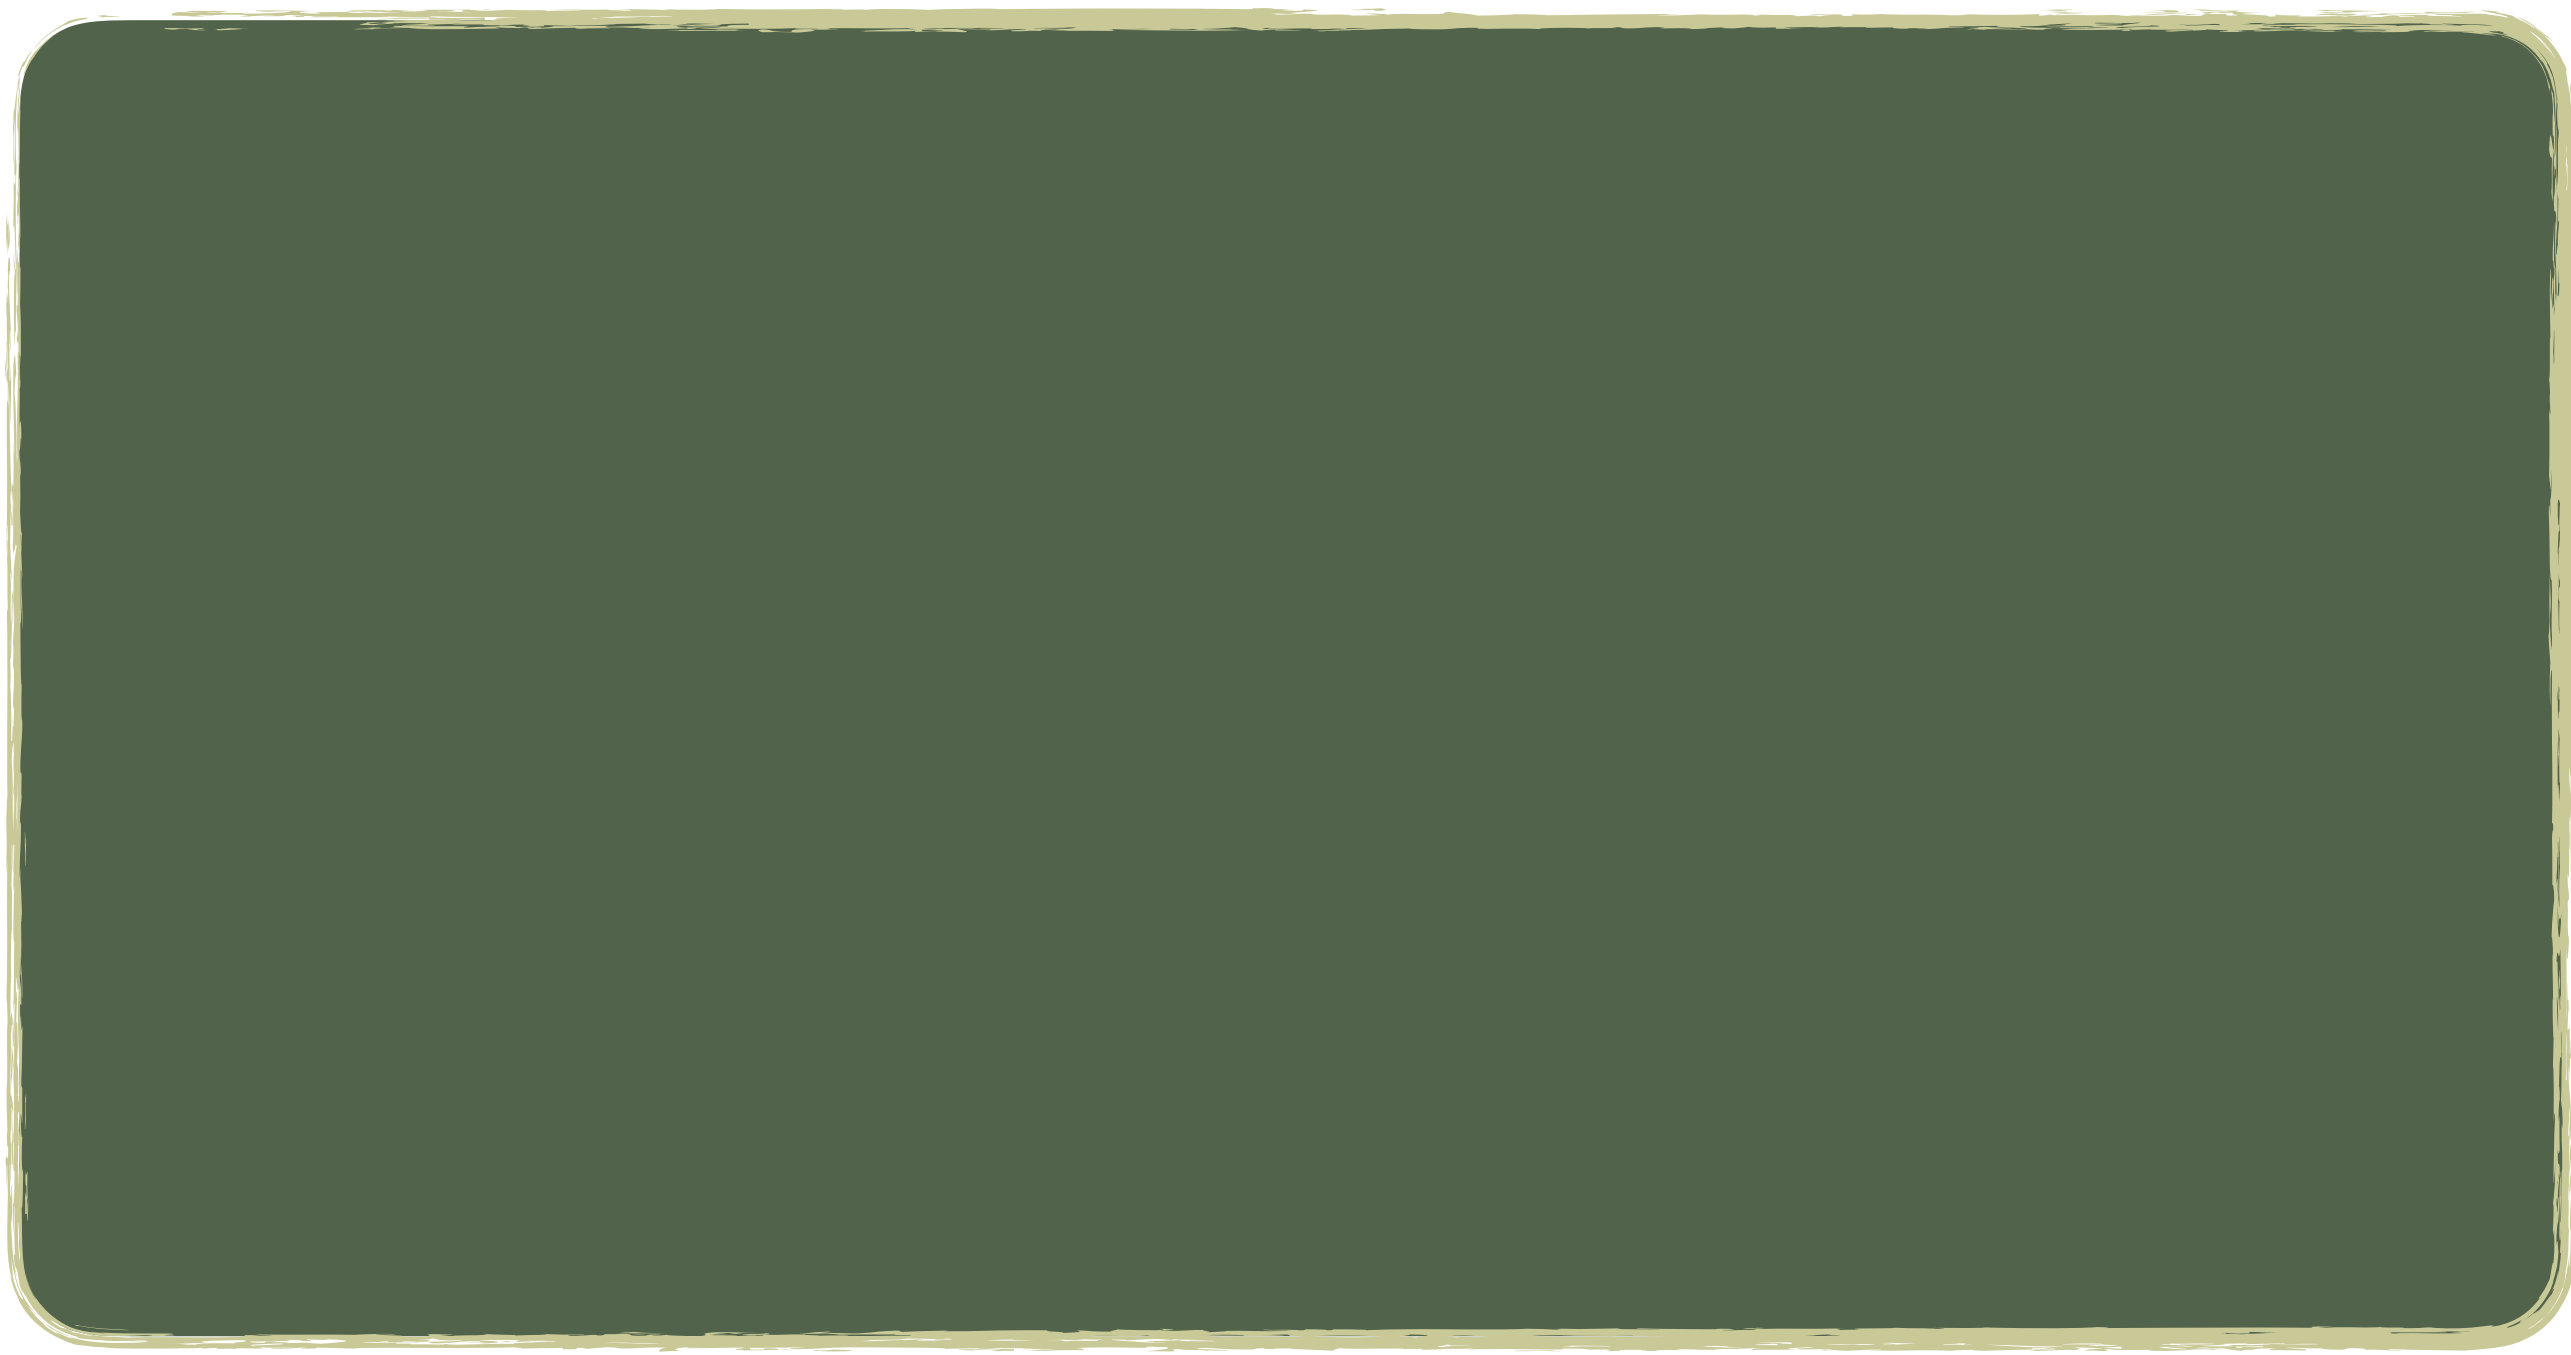

Animals have a big impact on the environment and they affect people and other animals. There are many endangered species on our planet and every species affects another species in some way. The food chain is very delicate and it can be messed up very easily. Even though we are greatly affected by animals, we are also contributing to this problem. Poachers are over hunting and fishing species and many have already gone extinct because of it. Humans also contribute to global warming and deforestation, which puts animals in danger as well. Knowing about endangered species is very important because the more we know, the more we can do to help the animals that are in danger of extinction.

Animal Extinction

Why are animals important?

Animals have a big impact on the environment and they affect people and other animals. There are many endangered species on our planet and every species affects another species in some way. The food chain is very delicate and it can be messed up very easily. Even though we are greatly affected by animals, we are also contributing to this problem. Poachers are over hunting and fishing species and many have already gone extinct because of it. Humans also contribute to global warming and deforestation, which puts animals in danger as well. Knowing about endangered species is very important because the more we know, the more we can do to help the animals that are in danger of extinction.

